

"What is going on here? Are they both reading?" Father asks.

"I don't know. They ran to the house after fishing. They ate and then they brought out their books.

I thought it was strange. I heard them singing, too.

We really should spend more time reading with them," says Mother.